"It began at twelve o'clock sharp and ended at two o'clock dull."

- Anonymous blog review of last September's luncheon

Sorry for sending the luncheon invitations a week or so later than usual. It's a BLOHARDS' tradition to wait until the team wins a game, something that did not occur during our boys' visits to Arlington and Cleveland. But two-out-of-three vs. the Yankees has restored order in the world, as well as dramatically shrinking the jumping lines at the Tobin Bridge

There will be more plate-twirling than usual at our May bash. Author Harvey Frommer will be hawking his latest coffee table masterpiece, Remembering Fenway Park. Vintage and never-before-seen photos of "America's Most Beloved Ballpark" are combined with touching Fenway-related stories and observations. Difficult as it might be to believe, several of these eloquent personal accounts were contributed by BLOHARDS.

But that's not all, folks. Ray Duffy is already in full dress-rehearsals for the Henry Berry Memorial Slideshow. WFAN's Ed Randall promises to bring his A-stuff, even though his velocity is reported to be down on the radar gun. Fresh from extending his employment contracts with Sox radio and with ESPN, WEEL's Dave O'Brien should have a bounce in his step as he interviews a wary Red Sox player TBD. And NY's corrupt RSN Governor, Chris Wertz, promises a short speech in which he promises to deny everything and name names.

Still need more convincing? With a shine on his shoes and a melody in his heart, our club's official crooner, John Pizzarelli, will lead us in song at least twice – a) "Take Me Out To the Ballgame (this time with the elusive second verse) and b) the original Narragansett jingle. Lyric sheets will be provided. And because he has his kids' tuition obligations to meet, Peter Collery will have boxes (and boxes) of the BLOHARDS' popular new interlocking NY (Next Year) t-shirts to sell. Big seller on the bus trip. XXL available!
